Instructions for Reading Log

As you read Tigerland and Other Unintended Destinations, you will complete a reading log. For each chapter, find one quote or passage that falls into each of these categories:

- (1) Passages that reveal something about the author's view of the human impact on conservation. Is it optimistic, pessimistic, hopeful, etc.?
- (2) Passages that describe obstacles or dangers faced by the author in the field.
- (3) Passages that describe people that the author admired or found interesting.
- (4) Passages that describe wildlife that the author was studying or trying to save.

In the first column, write the number which indicates the category passage (1, 2, 3, or 4); in the second column, copy the passage from the book; and in the third column, write down your observation or response to the quotation including any questions that you might have.

After you have finished reading the book, you will write a brief essay on one of these topics:

- What are some ways that humans can impact biological diversity?
- How do conservation biologists investigate human impacts on biological diversity?
- What are some practical approaches that can promote human development without threatening biological diversity?
- What are some economic and ethical arguments for preserving biological diversity?

Use your notes from the reading log to help you write the essay.

Instructions for Writing Essay

Write a brief essay on one of these topics:

- What are some ways that humans can impact biological diversity?
- How do conservation biologists investigate human impacts on biological diversity?
- What are some practical approaches that can promote human development without threatening biological diversity?
- What are some economic and ethical arguments for preserving biological diversity?

Use information that you have gathered from reading Tigerland and Other Unintended Destinations, as well as any other credible sources, to write a brief essay in response to one of the questions. Be sure to use your reading log to find supporting details from the book. Include footnotes to reference any quotations, statistics, or other information that you have used to write your essay and be sure to include all of these sources in a bibliography.

A well-researched and well-written essay should contain all of these elements:

- A clearly stated main idea that makes clear the essay's purpose.
- A complete answer to all parts of the question.
- Evidence of a full and complete understanding of the topic you have selected.
- Pertinent, accurate, and cited supporting details from the book or from other sources that are adequate to support the main concept.
- A properly cited bibliography that includes all of the references used to write your essay.
